E. Jordan Wins From Charlevoix

Take Football Game By 6 to 0 Score on Local Field Last Friday.

Last Friday afternoon at three o'clock a fair crowd of East Jordan fans witnessed a fine game of Football between East Jordan and our old rivals, Charlevoix. Charlevoix lost their first game but were very confident of winning against us, too much so it seems, for they finished on the wrong side of a 6 to 0 score.

James Gleason and Chris Taylor were the outstanding ground gainers for East Jordan while on the line the work of St. Charles and Ambergy was noticeable in stopping the line drives of Charlevoix.

The game was played at the Fair Grounds where a strong south wind favored the passes and punts of the team going with the wind. Charlevoix kicked off to Taylor who received the ball on Charlevoix's thirty yard line, returning it ten yards. The East Jordan boys did not make their ten yards and were forced to punt. The punt was with the wind and went so far into Charlevoix's territory that Charlevoix punted back on the first down. Taylor took the ball on the first down around the Charlevoix end for 15 yards. This was the first of many ground gaining end runs, as East Jordan made practically all her gains on this style of play. Before the end of the first quarter it was quite apparent, although there was no scoring done, that Charlevoix was on the defense most of the time.

The second quarter was nearly a repetition of the first with Gleason and Taylor of East Jordan making great gains on end runs, chiefly due to determination and fine interference. East Jordan had the ball most of the time with Charlevoix always far from their goal line. The half ended 0 to 0.

The only touch-down of the game came in the third quarter. East Jordan kicked to Charlevoix but they were stopped so far in our territory that they punted on the first down. Gleason returned the ball 17 yards and then Taylor made five on another end run and Gleason 12 yards the same way. This put the ball on our three yard line and two line smashes gave only one yard. Then Taylor took the ball around right end for a touchdown. Gleason failed to kick between the bars for the one point. The rest of the third quarter was just a see-saw back and forth, not very sensational except for Captain Danforth's breaking through the line and downing the Charlevoix fullback for a loss of ten yards on what should have been a fake lateral pass. The quarter ended 6 to 0 in our favor.

The last quarter began by Taylor's losing four yards on the first play and then gaining 12 on the second. First down was made on the next play but the next was a fumble. On the second down Gleason made about 10 yards on an end run, but in his second attempt to do it with Taylor carrying the ball Farmer of Charlevoix broke through our interference and tackled Taylor. When Charlevoix received the ball an a punt they threw discretion to the winds and tried a pass. It was knocked down so they tried another. This one was good and gave them first down again. They tried two more unsuccessful passes and according to the new rule, lost five yards and a down for more than one incomplete pass i the series of four downs. Charlevoix punted and Gleason made a fine run up the field but the final whistle blew before the ball could be advanced any nearer the goal line.

IMPRISONED 5 DAYS, 43 MINERS RESCUED

Ironwood, Mich., Workmen Subsisted on Birchbark Soup; Back to Work.

Ironwood, Mich.—The 43 miners who were for five days held prisoners nearly 800 feet below the earth's surface in the G. Pabst mine here were rescued through the heroic efforts of fellow miners, one of the most remarkable rescues in the history of mining.

Little worse for their harrowing experience, after recuperation in a hospital and slight medical attention, the majority of the men are back at their daily grind in the great copper mines as though nothing out of the ordinary had happened to them and had caused the nation to pause in anxiety for their safety only a few days ago.

The 43 prisoners of the Pabst mine were trapped by an earth-slide which penned them in the darkness where they daily toiled. That the men realized their predicament was evident, but they had confidence in their fellow workers and were buoyed up by their hope for early release.

Fortunately, the trapped men were not without fresh air and an ample supply of water.

Their condition was due largely to one fact. They knew how to take care of themselves. Capt. Thomas Trewarth, boss of their underground labors, was their dictator when disaster threatened. He gathered them together, apportioned their hours of sleep and sentry duty, and established an underground camp.

Birchbark, pulled from the shoring of the drift and boiled in tin dinner pails, furnished food.

They had started an effort to dig through to another shaft, but ceased that when sounds, reverberating through the diggings, told them fellow workers were nearing and that rescue was only a matter of hours.

Rescue was effected through hundreds of feet of underground shafts and laterals, some hurriedly constructed and others weakened and made unsafe by the cave-in.

Of the three efforts undertaken to provide a way to bring the imprisoned men to the surface, the most hazardous was successful. This was upward from the bottom of the shaft, blocked in several places by the cave-in. Access to the bottom of the shaft was gained through a lateral tunnel connecting with the shaft of another mine.

Working upward, the rescuers found the tunnel blocked at the twenty-third level. They dug around this blocked section and on the twenty-first level found the shaft open. From there they worked through debris to the eighth level, the subterranean abode of the men.

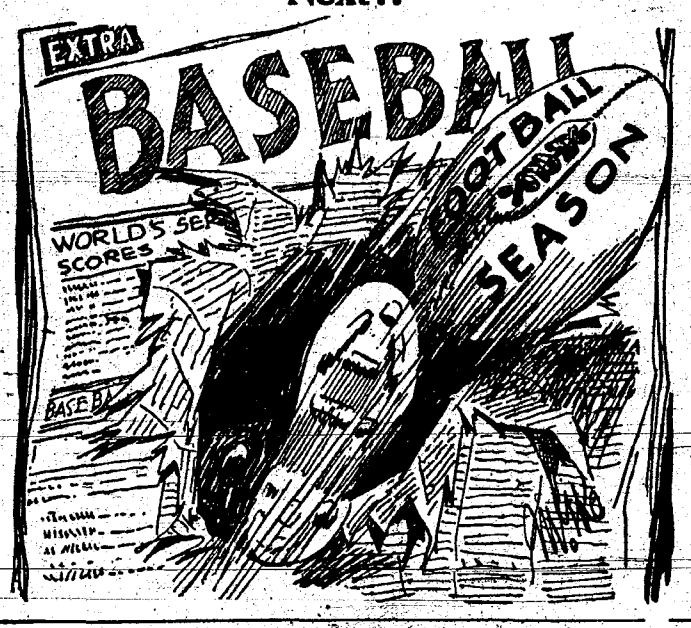

From the eighth level the miners were forced to descend to the twenty-sixth level, then through the lateral to the other mine, and then up through that shaft to the surface.

A glad shout from 5000 persons crowded about the shaft arose as the first of the 48 stepped out of the hoisting case.

Three workmen were killed at the time of the cave-in accident, but it is believed that all of the 43 miners who were rescued will recover.

An editor with his mind made up is a poor subject for argument.

Charles Tyler Is Killed Instantly

Was Returning Home From Taking Corn To Factory. Was Pioneer Resident of Antrim County.

Charles Tyler, pioneer resident of Central Lake township and a prominent farmer living two miles south and west of Central Lake was killed instantly, late Tuesday, when his large wagon ran over him while returning home from taking a load of sweet corn to the Central Lake Canning Co.

Mr. Tyler, it is believed, stopped at the watering trough to water his team and while checking up the team one of them became frightened and ran away and in some way threw him under one of the wheels.

The fatal accident was not witnessed by no one, but he was found lying in the middle of the road soon after the accident occured.

The only marks found on his body was a hole in the side of his head near the temple. Death it is supposed, was instantaneous.—Central Lake Torch.

Will Seek $100,000,000 for Texas Cotton Fund

Dallas, Texas.—A fund of $100,000,000 is to be raised immediately by Texas bankers to be lent at $50 a bale at 6 per cent interest per annum to retire 1,000,000 bales of cotton from the market.

The clearing house associations of Dallas, Houston, Waco, Galveston and other Texas financial centers are to carry out the plan adopted at a special conference called by the Dallas Clearing House association.

The plan includes 25 per cent acreage reduction in cotton for 1927 to be pledged by bankers and landlords. The same campaign is to be carried into other southern states at once, until at least 8,000,000 bales have been retired from the market.

Civil War Foes Meet Once More

In the Battle of the Wilderness in the Civil war, Henry Hoyt of Massachusetts (left) was shot down and captured by a detachment under command of Augustine Royall of Virginia, of the Confederate army (right). After a lapse of more than half a century, the two met again when they attended the convention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways association in Richmond, Va., a few days ago. Mr. Hoyt is a retired rector of the Episcopal church in Philadelphia.

Farm Tax Figures Sought By M. S. C.

The ratio between the earning capacity of Michigan farms and their assessed valuation for the past 7 years will be sought through questionnaires which are being mailed out over the State by the department of agricultural economics at the Michigan State College.

Figures received in answer to these question forms, and the ratios determined upon, will then be available to any individual or organization interested in the problem of farm land taxation, according to R. Wayne Newton, research associate in the M. S. C. economics department, who is conducting the tax survey.

A total of 30,000 of the questionnaires will be distributed to Michigan farm owners, in order to get information from every section of the state. The divisions of Finance and of Land Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture are said to be co-operating in the work.

"This investigation is an opportunity for farmers to submit their side of the land taxation question," says Mr. Newton. "A high percentage of questionnaires filled out and returned will insure accuracy in in the figure determined upon to represent the ratio between the earning power of farms and their assessed valuation."

Mailing of the question forms was started on October 1.

Do You Need Pyrotol?

Here's another opportunity for you to purchase Pyrotol at $9.50 cwt., and possibly the last one.

The supply of this war salvage product is nearly depleted according to L. F. Livingston, Agr'l Engineering Specialist, and remembe if you have a few stumps or stones in your way, do it now, as soon, you will have to pay commercial prices and that will mean around $25.00 cwt.

A letter from Co. Agent Lytle of Gaylord states a carload will arrive there in about a week, and first come will be first served. If interested, send your money and order to Co. Agent Mellencamp, Boyne City, arrangements will then be made for the transportation. If taken from car-door, only $9.50 cwt., if handled, a small handling charge will have to be added. How much do you want?

B. C. MELLENCAMP,
Co. Agr'l Agent.

Revenue Gain Reflects Large U. S. Business

Washington.—In the analysis of revenue for the fiscal year ended July 30, 1926, the report of the internal revenue bureau holds that substantial increases in nearly all tax collections reflect the country's prosperous business condition.

During the year internal revenue receipts from all sources were $2,835,999,892, an increase of $251,859,624 over those of the fiscal year of 1925.

New York took first place, Pennsylvania, second, Michigan third, and Illinois fourth among the states in total internal revenue collections. The figures are: New York, $733,729,733.66; Pennsylvania, $252,817,837.72; Michigan, $225,629,148.44; and Illinois, $216,719,787.42.

Will Not Cut Army and Navy

Washington.—President Coolidge has made it known that there is no foundation for the reports that substantial cuts are proposed in army and navy appropriations as part of the administration's economic policy.

Legion to Sail on Levithian

Washington.—American Legian officials have completed arrangements with the Emergency Fleet corporation for the transport in 1927 of delegates to the Legion convention in Paris.

WONDERFUL HEALTH REPAYS WISE FORETHOUGHT.

Mrs. Wm. C. Fischer, 2009 Woodbourne Ave., Louisville, Ky., occasionally takes Foley Pills, a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys, which helped her over a quite severe ailment. "Yes," she says, "I still take Foley Pills, diuretic, at times, when ever I feel I need them, and as a result my health is wonderful." Not surprising, for Foley Pills, diuretic, are a reliable, valuable, tonic medicine, constantly in use over 25 years, promoting that satisfactory cleansing flow so necessary to good health. Try them.—Hite's Drug Store. adv.

ALL HIGH SCHOOL PARTY

A very successful, all school party was given last Friday night in the high school auditorium under the auspices of the Athletic Association, Games planned by a committee of three, Mr. Wells, Miss Campbell, and Miss Poole, were played from 7 o'clock until eight-thirty, each member of the high school faculty taking charge of one game. The evening began with a "sing" led by Miss Kelly, which was followed with the Grand March directed by Mr. Wells. Three Deep, Going to Jerusalem, Passing the Ball, Newspaper Race, and Farmer in the Dell were then played, all of which seemed to be thoroughly enjoyed. This part of the program was followed by dancing, the music being furnished free of charge by the High School Jazz Orchestra. All high school students, junior high students, alumni, and members of the faculty were cordially invited to join in the fun, and were all very well represented at the party. A small admission fee was charged, the proceeds going to the Athletic Association. The Charlevoix Foot Ball Team attended as guests.

HIGH SCHOOL SONG CONTEST

For several years East Jordan High School has not had enough high school songs. This year a contest was held for the purpose of obtaining some new ones to use at assemblies, games, and other school gatherings. All members of the English classes submitted songs to this contest. These were judged by a committee from the faculty. 11 of the songs, those of Isabel Kitsman, Margaret Staley, Evelyn Webster, Viola Snyder, Dorothy Walton, Fredrica Shaw, Dorothy Hager, William Taylor, Harry McHale, and Ira Weaver were adopted. In the two assembly meetings at which they have been sung they have added much to the spirit of our student body.

SCHOOL MARKING SYSTEM

The entire school system is inaugurating this year the new uniform system of marking in this State: The development of a uniform counting and transfer system also called for a uniform system of marking, in order that transfers may be readily understandable in any community they happen to reach. This new marking system applies to all public, non-public, and private educational institutions throughout the State. It is the same from Kindergarten through the University. The five point letter system that was advocated and finally adopted in the Michigan schools is as follows:

A—Superior (94-100 per cent)
B—Above the Average 86-93)
C—The Average Pupil (77-85)
D—Below the Average (70-76)
E—Failure (0-69)
I—Incomplete.
X—Absent from Examination.
Dr—Dropped.

(The use of signs plus, hyphen, such as D plus, C-, etc., is optional with the teacher.)

It has been found in a nation wide survey that out of every one hundred students, 3-10 per cent will receive A, 20-22 per cent B, 40-55 per cent C, 20-22 per cent D, and 3-10 per cent F. If a student receives a grade of D or less in any subject, we want the parents to immediately see the teacher and talk over the situation, in the hope that through this co-operation we may find a remedy.

The average child of five years can work her parents better than their parents.

You can rave about the hot weather all you want to, but in about 90 days you will miss it.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT

A serious accident occurred Wednesday morning at about 8 o'clock when Miss Dorothy Jarman of Knoll Krest had taken her father, Geo. Jarman, and brother, Bob to Gravel Hill to get a cow out of the pasture, and turned around to go immediately home, as she came up onto the gravel road from the side road which runs east to the Star Schoolhouse, when she was right in the middle of the road to take the right track, she was struck right in the back by a Chevrolet Sedan coming from the south, driven by Ben Reid and containing besides the driver, Roy Hammond and Cal Bennett of East Jordan. The Ford which Miss Jarman was driving was turned heading the north, while the Sedan was turned once and a half over, resting on its top, Miss Jarman was thrown clear of the car, a deep gash was cut between her eyes, one on her head, a cut on one hand and a badly bruised knee, where she struck the road. She scrambled to her feet and opened the car door so the men could get out, and then she fainted away. The men were not hurt much, only one had a large bump on the head. Clare Staley, who had just started for school, heard the crash and ran back and told his father, Bert Staley, who immediately got into his car and went to the scene. He took all of the party to East Jordan, where Miss Jarman received medical treatment, meanwhile Arthur Bradford had called Mrs. Christine Loomis, who took Miss Jarman's sisters, Mrs. Mercy Woerful and Mrs. Harriet Conyer and started to East Jordan, when they got there Miss Jarman was very much shaken, but was able to be brought to the home of her sister, Mrs. Mercy Woerful at Gravel Hill. The extent of her injuries cannot yet be determined.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Earth Grows Smaller

Although it is believed that the earth is gradually shrinking as the heat from the center leaks out through the crust and that it may be wearing off as the result of leakage of the gases from the atmosphere, it would take many, many millions of years to notice this in the slightest degree.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Muskegon—W. S. Butterfield, Detroit theater magnate, announced that he will build a $500,000 theater in Muskegon to seat 1,800 persons. Work will be started as soon as a deal for the purchase of a site is completed.

Detroit—The annual report of the Fire Prevention Bureau for 1925, submitted to the Board of Fire Commissioners, shows 9,968 fires, an increase of 1,251 over 1924 and a decrease in loss of approximately $100,000. There were 1,438 needless and false alarms.

Battle Creek—Two children were burned to death, their mother was burned fatally, and a third child suffered fatal burns and injuries, when she was thrown from an upstairs window, in a fire which destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cook.

Pontiac—Addition of a $70,000 office area to the administration building of the Oakland Motor Car company plant here has been announced by officials. The addition will afford 16,000 feet of floor space and is being erected as a fourth floor to the present structure.

Ironwood — Thanksgiving services were given in all churches Sunday, offering thanks for the deliverance of the 43 entombed miners. All are in good health, and physical condition despite their 51-2 days of imprisonment, on the eighth level of a local iron mine.

Saginaw—Leslie Everhart, alias Burke and Laverna Haynes, who escaped from jail here last March, are sentenced to die in February for the slaying of a Florida policeman, according to word received from Clearwater, Fla. The pair were implicated in a fur robbery here.

Saginaw—The thirty-fifth oil well, brought in at a depth of 1,805, the shallowest yet, was struck on land owned by the Merrill-Palmer School of Motherhood, of Detroit, and leased to the Wells-Schmidt oil company, of this city. From every indication the well will prove to be one of the best in the field.

Detroit—Efforts to bring the 1928 presidential convention of the Republican party to Detroit are under way. An invitation to the party to convene here was sent by the Michigan Republican committee at their recent convention and their plea will be strengthened by the Detroit Convention and Tourist Bureau.

Ann Arbor—A gift of $100,000 toward the Women's League building by Robert Patterson Lamont of Lake Forest Ill., will virtually assure the successful completion of one of the greatest financial campaigns ever undertaken by the University of Michigan. The gift brings the fund within $150,000 of it $1,000,000 goal.

Detroit—Detroit will be visited by the United States dirigible Los Angeles between October 12 and 15, while it is on its annual cruise, according to advices received by the aviation committee of the Board of Commerce. The giant ship will start its trip from Lakehurst, N. J. At Detroit it will anchor at the Ford airport.

Grosse Pointe—Work on a six acre municipal park and improvements to the water front to include docking facilities at Lake Shore and Vernier roads, Grosse Pointe Shores village, has been started. Approval of the plan was given by the voters at a recent election when they authorized a bond issue of $134,000 to finance the project.

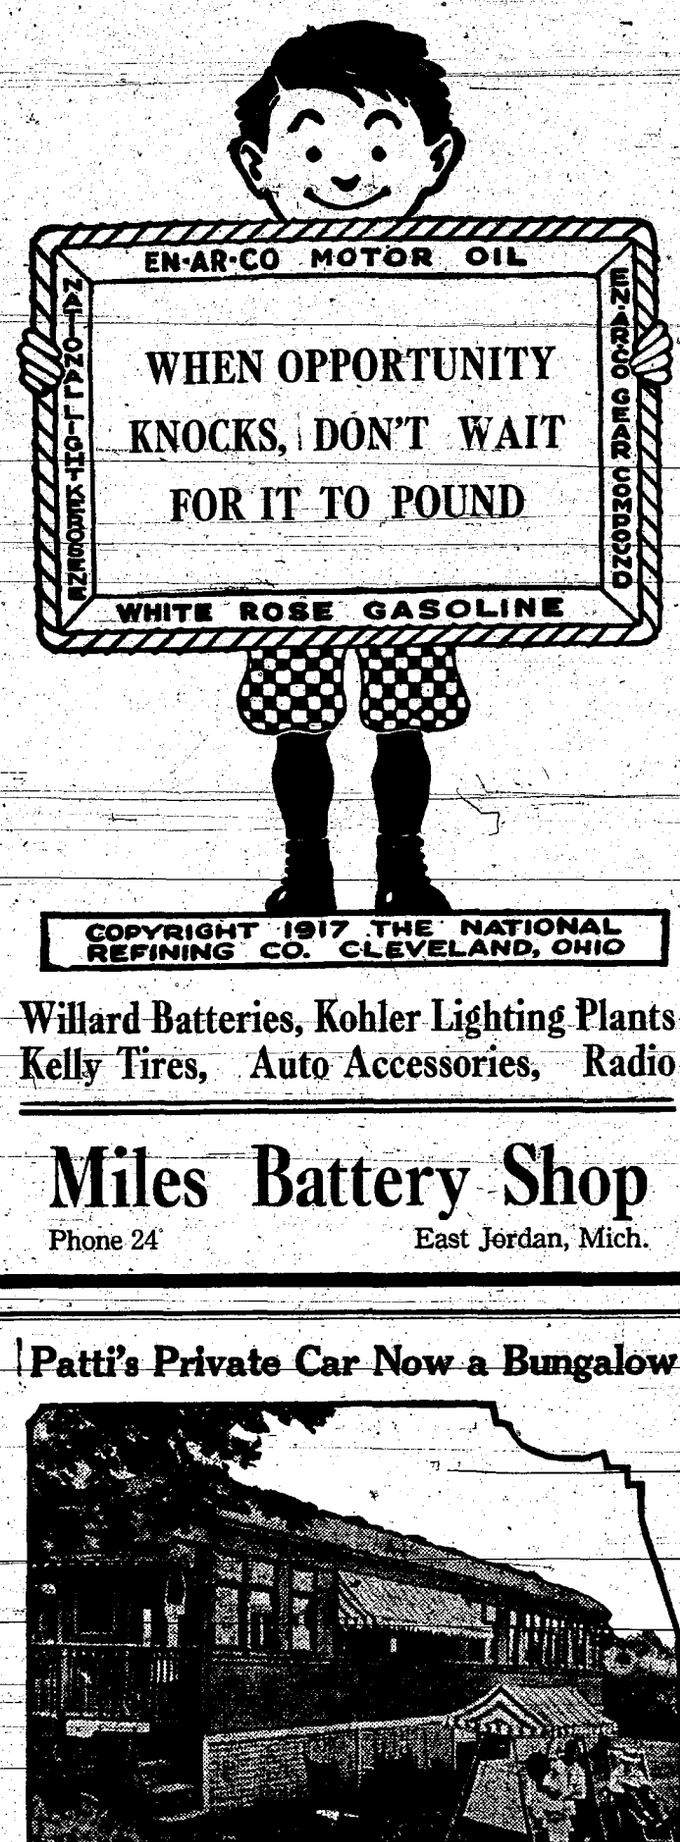

Ann Arbor—Prof. Francis W. Kelsey of the University of Michigan, will return from abroad with a remarkable collection of ancient documents, ranging in date from the middle of the Third Century, B. C., to the end of the Sixth Century, A. D., which has been presented to the University by Oscar Webber and Richard H. Webber, of Detroit.

Detroit—Delegates to the Republican state convention, from all counties excepting Wayne, nominated candidates for state offices to be voted upon at the November election, as follows: Ernest A. Snow, justice of supreme court; John S. Haggerty, secretary of state; William W. Potter, attorney general; Oramel B. Fuller, auditor general; Frank B. McKay, state treasurer.

Detroit—Fraulein Tony Sender, youngest member of the German Reichstag and termed the most beautiful woman of any legislative body in the world, spoke at a public meeting here, on "Labor and Politics in Germany Today." Miss Sender is making a speaking tour of the United States. Although this is her first visit to this country and she has never been to England, she speaks our language without a noticeable accent

East Lansing—Freshman girls at Michigan State college will be required to "sign in" half an hour earlier than the time allowed first year students in former years. The new co-eds living in college dormitories must be in the house at 8:45 every night except Saturday and Sunday, when they are allowed to remain out until midnight. Girls in all other classes including the sophomore, must be in by 10 o'clock during the week, and 12 o'clock week-end nights and evenings before holidays.

CHAPTER II

Rodney Loses a Battle

Rodney Bangs, author of "The Black Pearl" and co-author of "The Man Above," was annoyed. When Mr. Bangs was annoyed he usually betrayed the fact, for his was an open nature.

He was betraying it now. His clear, red-brown eyes were clouded. The healthy pink of his youthful cheeks had deepened to an unbecoming flush. His wide, engaging grin, the grin of a friendly bulldog, was lacking, and his lips were set tight.

Sitting on a low chair in the dressing room of the bachelor apartment he and Lawrence Devon occupied together, Rodney drew on a shoe and stamped his foot down into it with an emphasis that shook the floor. Devon, fastening his tie before the full-length mirror set in the door leading to their common bathroom, started at the sound, like a high-strung prima donna. This was one of Laurie's temperamental mornings.

"What the devil's the matter with you, Bangs?" he demanded, but without ill humor. "Can't you get on a shoe without imitating the recoil of a seventy-five centimeter gun?"

Bangs grunted, drew on the other shoe, and drove his foot into it with increased energy. Laurie looked at him, and this time there was a spark in his black eyes. Very quietly he turned, crossed the small room, and, planting himself in front of his chum, resentfully stared down at the dynamic youth.

"What's the idea?" he demanded. "Are you deliberately trying to be annoying?"

Rodney did not raise his head. His fingers were busy with a complicated knot.

"Oh, shut up!" he muttered.

Laurie, his hands in his pockets, remained where he was. Under his continued inspection the fingers of Bangs grew clumsy. He fumbled with the knot, and, having unfastened it, prolonged to the utmost the process of lacing his shoes. He knew what must come as soon as he settled back in his chair. It had been coming for days. He was in for an unpleasant ten minutes. But the situation was one he had deliberately created as the only possible way of bringing about a serious talk with his friend. Now that it was here he was anxious to make the most of it. With head bent and thoughts busy he played for time.

At last, the shoes laced and his campaign mapped out, he sat up and met Laurie's eyes. Their expression of antagonism, temporary though he knew it to be, hurt him. Devon, when he had his own way, and he usually had it, was a singularly sweet-tempered chap. Never before, throughout their year of close association, had he looked at Bangs like that. Rodney knew that he deserved the look. For days past he had deliberately subjected his companion to a series of annoyances, small but intensely irritating.

"Well?" demanded Laurie. "What's the answer?"

"What answer?" Rodney was in the position of a small boy challenged to combat in cold blood. He was experiencing some difficulty in working himself up to the necessary heat for an engagement. But Laurie's next words helped him out.

"You've been making a d—d nuisance of yourself for the last week," he said deliberately. "I want to know why."

Bangs squared his stocky shoulders and rose to his feet. His brown eyes were below the level of his chum's black ones, but the two glances met sharply and a flash passed between them. Under the force of his rising excitement the voice of Rodney shook.

"The reason I've been a d—d nuisance," he said curtly, "is because you've been acting like an infernal fool, and I'm sick of it."

Laurie's lips tightened, but the other rushed on without giving him a chance to reply. The moment was his. He must crowd into it all he had not dared to say before and might not be given a chance to say again.

"Oh, I know what you'll say!" he cried. "It's none of my business, and you're your own master, and all that sort of rot. And I know you're not drinking, and God knows I'm not ass enough to take on any high moral tone and try to preach to you, whatever you do. What gets my goat, Devon, and the only thing I'm worrying about, is this infernal waste of your time and mine."

Laurie grinned, and the grin infuriated Bangs. He whirled away from it. A footstool impeded his progress, and he kicked it out of the way with large abandon. It was his habit to rush about a room when he was talking excitedly. He rushed about now; and Laurie lit a cigarette and watched him, at first angrily, then with a growing tolerance born of memories of scenes in their plays which Bangs had thrashed out in much this same manner. The world could never be wholly uninteresting while Rodney pranced about in it, cutting the air with gestures like that.

"Here I am," snapped Rodney, "ready with my play, the best plot I've had yet. You won't let me even mention it to you. Here's the new season. Here's Epstein, sitting on our doormat with a check-book in each hand, waiting to put on anything we give him. You know he's lost a small fortune this fall. You know it's up to us to give him a play that will pull him out of the hole he's in. Here's Haxon, the best director in town, marking time and holding off other managers in the hope that you and I will get down to business. And here you are, the fellow we're all counting on—" He stopped for breath and adjectives.

"Yes," Laurie politely prompted him. "Here I am. What about it? What am I doing?"

"You know d—d well what you're doing. You're loafing!" Bangs fired the word at him as if it were a shell from a Big Bertha. "You're loafing till it makes us all sick to look at you. I thought a week or two of it would be enough, when you realized the conditions; but it's gone on for a month; and, instead of getting tired, you're getting more and more into the loafing habit. You abuse time till it shrieks in agony."

"Good sentence," applauded Laurie. "But don't waste it on me. Put it into a play."

Bangs seemed not to hear him. He was standing by the room's one window, now, staring unseeingly out of it, his hands deep in his pockets, taking in the knowledge of the failure of his appeal. Under the realization of this, he tossed a final taunt over his shoulder.

"I can forgive the big blunders a man makes in his life," he muttered; "but I haven't much patience with a chap that lies around and shirks at a time like this!"

"Here I Am," Snapped Rodney.

Laurie removed the half-smoked cigarette from his mouth, and not finding an ash tray within reach, carefully crushed out its burning end against the polished top of the dressing case. He had grown rather pale.

"That will be about all, Bangs," he said quietly. "What you and Epstein and Haxon don't seem to remember is just one thing. If you don't like matters as they are, it's mighty easy to change them. It doesn't take half a minute to agree to dissolve a partnership."

"I know." Bangs returned to his chair, and, dropping limply into it, his hands still in his pockets, stared despondently at his outstretched legs. "That's all it means to you," he went on, morosely. "Our partnership is one in a thousand. It's based on friendship as well as on financial interest. If I do say it, it represents a combination of brains, ability, backing and prospects that comes only once in a lifetime, if it comes at all. Yet in one year you're sick of it, and tired of work. You're ready to throw it all over, and to throw over at the same time the men whose interests are bound up with yours. You're dawdling in cabarets and roadhouses and restaurants, when you might be doing Work—" Bangs' voice capitalized the word—"real work," he added fiercely, "work other fellows would give their souls to be able to do."

He ended on a flat note, oddly unlike his usual buoyant tones, and sat still as if everything had been said.

Laurie lit a fresh cigarette, drew in a mouthful of smoke, and exhaled it in a series of pretty rings. In his brief college experience he had devoted some time to acquiring this art. Admiringly watching the little rings pass through the big rings, he spoke with studied carelessness.

"It was a pretty good scene, Bangs," he said, "and it showed careful rehearsing. But it would be a lot more effective if you had a real situation to base it on. As it is, you're making a devil of a row about nothing. I worked like a horse all last year, and you know it. Now I'm resting, or loafing, if you prefer to call it that, and"—he bit off the words and fairly threw them at his friend—"it will save you and Epstein and Haxon a lot of mental wear and tear if you will mind your own business and let me alone."

Bangs raised his eyes and dropped them again.

"You are our business," he somberly reminded his partner. "I've got so I can't work without you," he added, with a humility new to him. "You know that. And you know I've got the plot. It's ready—great Scott, it's boiling in me! I'm crazy to get it out. And here I've got to sit around watching you kill time, while you know and I know that you'd be a d—n sight happier if you were on the job. Good Lord, Laurie, work's the biggest thing there is in life! Doesn't it mean anything at all to you?"

"Not just now." Laurie spoke with maddening nonchalance.

"Then there's something rotten in you."

Laurie winced, but made no answer. He hoped Bangs would go on talking and thus destroy the echo of his last words, with which the silent room seemed filled. But nothing came. Rodney's opportunity had passed, and he was lost in depressed realization of his failure. Laurie strolled back to the mirror, his forgotten tie dangling in his hand.

"We'll let it go at that," he said then. "Think things over, and make up your mind what you want to do about the contract."

"All right."

Bangs replied in the same flat notes he had used a moment before, and without changing his position; but the words gave Laurie a shock. I did not believe that either Rodney or Epstein would contemplate a dissolution of their existing partnership; but an hour ago he would not have believed that Rodney Bangs could say to him the things he had said just now.

He was beginning to realize that he had tried his partners sorely in the month that had passed since his return to town; and all for what? He himself had brought out of the foolish experience nothing save a fired nervous system, a sense of boredom such as he had not known for a year, and, especially when he looked at Bangs, an acute mental discomfort which introspective persons would probably have diagnosed as the pangs of conscience. Laurie did not take the trouble to diagnose it. He merely resented it as a grievance added to the supreme grievance based on the fact that he had not yet even started on the high adventure he had promised himself.

He was gloomily considering both grievances, and tying his tie with his usual care, when something in the mirror caught and held his attention. He looked at it, at first casually, then with growing interest. In the glass, directly facing him, was a wide studio window. It was open, notwithstanding the cold January weather, and a comfortable, middle-aged, plump woman, evidently a superior type of caretaker, was sitting on the sill, polishing an inner pane. The scene was as vivid as a mirage, and it was like the mirage in that it was projected from some point which itself remained unseen.

Laurie turned to the one window the dressing-room afforded—a double French window, at his right, but a little behind him, and reaching to the floor. Through this he could see across a court the opposite side of his own building, but no such window or commonplace vision as had just come to him. In his absorption in the phenomenon he called to Bangs, who rose slowly, and, coming to his side, regarded the scene without much interest.

"It's a cross-projection from a house diagonally opposite us," he said, after studying the picture a moment. "It must be that old red studio building on the southwest corner of the square. If we had a room back of this and looking toward the west, we could see the real window."

"As it is," said Laurie, "we've got a reserved seat for an intimate study of any one who lives there. I wonder who has that studio?"

Bangs had no idea. He was grateful to the little episode, however, for spreading over the yielding ground beneath his feet the solid strip on which he had crossed back to his chum. He threw an arm across Laurie's shoulders and looked into his face, with something in his expression that reminded young Devon of a favorite collie he had loved and lost in boyhood.

"All right now?" the look asked, just as the dog's look had asked it of the little chap of ten, when something had gone wrong. Rodney's creed of life was held together by a few primitive laws, the first of which was loyalty. Already he was reproaching himself for what he had said and done. Laurie carefully completed the tying of his tie, and turned to him with his gayest smile.

"Hurry up and finish dressing," he cheerfully suggested, "and we'll go out to breakfast. Since you insist on waiting 'round for me like Mary's little lamb, I suppose I've got to feed you."

Rodney's wide grin responded, for the first time in many days. He hustled about, completing his toilet, and ten minutes later the two young men started out together with a lightness of spirit which each enjoyed and neither wholly understood. Both had a healthy horror of "sentimental stuff" and a gay, normal disregard of each other's feelings in ordinary intercourse. But in the past half-hour, for the first time in their association, they had come close to a serious break, and the soul of each had been chilled by a premonitory loneliness as definite as the touch of an icy finger. In the quick reaction they experienced now their spirits soared exultantly. They breakfasted in a fellowship such as they had not known since Barbara's marriage, the month before.

If Bangs had indulged in any dream of a change of life in Laurie, however, following this reconciliation, the next few days destroyed the tender shoots of that hope. Laurie's manner retained its pleasant camaraderie, but work and he met as strangers and passed each other by. The routine of his days remained what they had been during the past five weeks. He gadded about, apparently harmlessly, came home at shocking hours, and spent most of the bracing January days wrapped in a healthful slumber that infuriated Bangs, who wandered in and out of their apartment like an unhappy ghost. On the rare occasions when he and Rodney lunched or dined together, Laurie was entirely good-humored and when Epstein was with them seemed wholly impervious to any hints thrown out, none too subtly, by his producing partner.

"Listen, Laurie," said that disgusted individual, almost a month after the new year had been ushered in, "the new year's here. That's a good time for a young fella to get busy again on somethin' worth while. Ain't I right?"

Laurie suppressed a yawn and carefully struck off with his little finger the firm ash of an excellent cigarette. He was consuming thirty or forty cigarettes a day, and his nerves were beginning to show the effect of this indulgence.

"I believe it is," he courteously agreed. "It has been eminently rec[illegible] as a good [illegible]

[illegible] Laurie took on the guttural notes of his temperamental moments, "don't that mean nothin' to you?"

Laurie grinned. He had caught the quick look of warning Bangs shot at the producer and it amused him.

"Not yet," he said. "Not till I've had my adventure."

Epstein sniffed.

"The greatest adventure in life," he stated dogmatically, "is to make a lot of money. I tell you yy. Because then you got all the other adventures you can handle, trying to hold on to it!"

Bangs, who was developing a new and hitherto unsuspected vein of tact, encouraged Epstein to enlarge on this congenial theme. He now fully realized that Devon would go his own gait until he wearied of it, and that no argument or persuasion could enter his armor-clad mind. The position of Bangs was a difficult one, for while he was accepting and assimilating this unpleasant fact, Epstein and Haxon—impatient men by temperament and without much training in self-control—were getting wholly out of patience and therefore out of hand. Haxon, indeed, was for the time entirely out of hand, for he had finally started the rehearsals of a new play which, he grimly informed Bangs, would make "The Man Above" look like a canceled postage-stamp.

Bangs repeated the comment to his chum the next morning, during the late dressing-hour which now gave them almost their only opportunity for a few words together. He had hoped it would make an impression, and he listened with pleasure to a sharp exclamation from Laurie, who chanced to be standing before the door mirror in the dressing-room, brushing his hair. The next instant Bangs realized that it was not his news which had evoked the tribute of that exclamation.

"Come here!" called Laurie, urgently. "Here's something new; and, by Jove, isn't she a beauty!"

Bangs interrupted his toilet to lounge across the room. Looking over Laurie's shoulder, his eyes found the cynosure that held the gaze of his friend. The wide-open studio window was again reflected in the mirror, but with another occupant.

This was a girl, young and lovely. She appeared in the window like a half-length photograph in a frame. Her body showed only from above the waist. Her elbows were on the sill.

Her Elbows Were on the Sill. Her Chin Rested in the Hollow of Her Cupped Hands.

Her chin rested in the hollows of her cupped hands. Her wavy hair, parted on one side and drawn softly over the ears in the fashion of the season, was reddish-gold. Her eyes were brown, and very thoughtful. Down-dropped, they seemed to stare at something on the street below, but the girl's expression was not that of one who was looking at an object with interest. Instead, she seemed lost in a deep and melancholy abstraction.

"Isn't she charming!" he cried again.

Bangs' reply revealed a severely practical side of his nature.

"She'll have a beastly cold in the head if she doesn't shut that window," he grumpily suggested. But his interest, too, was aroused. He stared at the girl in the mirror with an attention almost equal to Laurie's.

As they looked, she suddenly stirred and moved backward, as if occultly warned of their survey. They saw her close the window, and, drawing a chair close to it, sit down and stare out through the pane, still with that intent, impersonal expression. Bangs strolled back to the dressing case and resumed his interrupted toilet. Laurie, fumbling vaguely with his brushes, kept his eyes on the girl in the mirror.

"She's a wonder. Prettiest girl I've ever seen, I think," he reflected aloud.

Bangs snorted.

"She's probably a peroxide," he said. "Even if she isn't, she can't hold a candle to your sister."

"Oh, Barbara—" Laurie considered the question of Barbara's beauty as if it were new to him. "Babs is good-looking," he handsomely conceded. "But there's something about this girl that's unusual. Perhaps it's her expression. She doesn't look happy."

Bangs sighed with ostentation.

"If you want to study some one that isn't happy, look at me," he invited warmly. "If that play of mine isn't out of me pretty soon, I'll have to have an operation!"

Laurie made no reply to this pathetic prediction, and Bangs sadly shook his head and concluded his toilet, meditating gloomily the while on the unpleasant idiosyncrasies of every one he knew. To see Devon turn suddenly into a loafer upset all his theories as well as his plans.

Laurie, for some reason, dawdled more than usual that morning. It was after eleven before he went to breakfast. An hour earlier Bangs departed alone for their pet restaurant.

The girl in the mirror remained at her window for a long time, and Laurie watched her in growing fascination. It was not until she rose and disappeared that he felt moved to consider so sordid a question as that of food.

He joined Bangs just as that youth was finishing his after-breakfast cigar. Even under its soothing influence, he was in the mood of combined exasperation and depression with which his friends were becoming familiar.

"If we had begun work as soon as we got back to town after your sister's wedding," he told Laurie, "we'd have had two acts ready by now, in the rough."

"No reason why you shouldn't have four acts ready, so far as I can see," murmured Laurie, cheerfully attacking his grape fruit. "All you've got to do is to write 'em."

Bangs' lips set.

"Not till I've talked 'em over with you and got your ideas," he declared, positively. "If you'd just let me give you an outline—"

Laurie set down his cup.

"Do I get my breakfast in peace, or don't I?" he demanded, coldly.

"You do, confound you!"

Bangs bit off the end of a fresh cigar and smoked it in stolid silence. He was a person of one idea. If he couldn't talk about the play, he couldn't talk at all. He meditated, considering his characters, his situations, his partner's and his own position, in a mental jumble that had lately become habitual and which was seriously affecting his nerves. Laurie, as he ate, chatted cheerfully and at random, apparently avoiding with care any subject that might interest his partner. Bangs rose abruptly.

"Well, I'm off," he said. "See you at dinner time, I suppose."

But Laurie, it appeared, had engagements. He was taking a party of friends out to Gedney Farms that evening, in his new car, and they might decide to stay there for a day or two. Also, though he did not confide this fact to Bangs, he had an engagement for the afternoon, at a place where the card rooms were quiet and elegant and the stakes high.

The attraction of these diversions filled his mind. He quite forgot the girl in the mirror, and it was no thought of her that drew him back to New York that night. The plans of his guests had changed, that was all. The change brought him home at eleven o'clock.

He fell asleep with surprising ease, and immediately, as it seemed, he saw the girl in the mirror. She was walking toward him, through what appeared to be a heavy fog. Her hands were outstretched to him, and he hurried to meet her; but even as he did so the fog closed down and he lost her, though he seemed to hear her voice, calling him from somewhere far away.

He awoke late in the morning with every detail of the dream vivid in his mind, so vivid, indeed, that when he approached the mirror after his morning plunge, it seemed almost a continuation of the dream to find the girl there.

He stopped short with a chuckle. The curtains of his French window were drawn apart, and in the mirror he saw the reflection of the girl as she stood in profile near her own uncurtained window and slowly dressed her hair.

It was wonderful hair, much more wonderful down than up. Laurie stared with pleasure at the red-gold mass that fell down over the girl's white garment. Then, with a little shock, he realized that the white garment was a night-dress. It was evident that the girl thought herself safe from observation and was quietly making her toilet for the morning.

Well, she should be safe. With a quick jerk, Laurie drew together the heavy curtains that hung at the sides of the long window. Then, smiling a little, he slowly dressed. His thoughts dwelt on the girl. It was odd that she should be literally projected into his life in that unusual fashion. He had never had any such experience before, nor had he heard of one just like it. It was unique and pleasant. It was especially pleasant to have her so young and so charming to look at. He wished he knew her name and something more about her. His thoughts were full of her.

Before he left the room he parted the curtains again to open the window wide, following his usual program. As he did so he glanced into his mirror. He saw her open window, but it was lifeless. Only his own disappointed face confronted him.

CHAPTER III

Laurie Meets Miss Mayo

Laurie thought much that day about the girl in the mirror, and he was again home at eleven that night, to the wonder of Mr. Bangs, who freely expressed his surprise.

"Something pleasant been coming your way?" he tactfully asked.

Laurie evaded the question, but he felt that something definitely pleasant had come his way. This something was a new interest, and he had needed a new interest very much. He hoped he would dream of the girl that night, but as he and Bangs unwisely consumed a Welsh rabbit before they went to bed, he dreamed instead of something highly unpleasant, and was glad to be awakened by the clear sunlight of a brilliant January day.

After breakfast he strolled across the square into the somber hall of the studio building on its southwest corner. The hall was empty, but he found and rang a bell at the entrance of a dingy elevator shaft. The elevator descended without haste. When it had reached the floor, the colored youth in charge of it inhospitably filled its doorway and regarded the visitor with indifference. This young man was easy to look at, but he was no one he knew.

Laurie handed him a dollar and the youth's expression changed, first to one of surprise, then to the tolerance of a man who is wise and is willing to share his wisdom. The visitor went at once to the point of his visit.

"A young lady lives here," he began. "She is very pretty, and she has reddish hair and brown eyes. She has a studio in one of the upper floors, at the front of the house. What's her name?"

The boy's face showed that he had instantly recognized the description, but he pondered dramatically.

"Dat young lady?" he then said. "Dat young lady mus' be Miss Mayo, in Twenty-nine, on de top flo'. She jes' moved in here las' Tuesday."

"Where does she come from, and what does she do?"

The boy hesitated. What did all this mean? And was he giving up too much for a dollar? Laurie grinned at him understandingly.

"I don't know her," he admitted, "and I don't expect to. I'd like to know something about her—that's all."

The youth nodded. He had the air of accepting an apology.

"I reckon she come fum some fur'n place. But I dunno what she do," he reluctantly admitted. "Mebbe she ain't doin' nothin' yit. She's home mos' de time. She don' go out hardly 'tall.—Seems like she don' know many folks."

He seemed about to say more, but stopped. For a moment he obviously hesitated, then blurted out what he had in mind.

"One t'ing got me guessin'," he muttered doubtfully. "Dat young lady, she don't seem t' eat nothin'!"

"What do you mean?" Laurie stared at him.

The boy shuffled his feet. He was on uncertain ground.

"Why, jes' what I said," he muttered, defensively. "Folkses here either eats in or dey eats out. Ef dey eats in, dey has stuff sent in—rolls an' eggs an' milk an' stuff like dat. Ef dey eats out, dey goes out, reg'lar, to meals. But Miss Mayo she don' seem to eat in or out. Nothin' comes in, an' she don' go out 'nough to eat reg'lar. I bin studyin' 'bout it consider'ble," he ended; and he looked unmistakably relieved, as if he had passed on to another a burden that was too heavy to carry alone.

Laurie hesitated. The situation was presenting a new angle and a wholly unexpected one. It began to look as if he had come on a sentimental errand and had stumbled on a tragedy.

There was a chance that the boy might be all wrong in his inferences, although this chance, Laurie mentally admitted, was slight. He knew the shrewdness of this youth's type, the precocious knowledge of human nature that often accompanies such training and environment as he had had. Probably he suspected even more than he had revealed. Something must be done.

Laurie drew a bill from his pocket.

"How soon can you leave the elevator?" he asked.

"'Bout one o'clock."

"All right. Now, here's what I want you to do. Take this money, go over to the Clarence restaurant, and buy a good lunch for that lady. Get some hot chicken or chops, buttered rolls, vegetables, and a bottle of milk. Have it packed nicely in a box. Have them put in some fresh eggs and extra rolls and butter for her breakfast. Deliver the box at her door as if it came from some one outside. Do that and keep the change. Understand?"

"Yaah, sah!" The boy's eyes and teeth were shining.

"All right. Go to it. I'll drop in later this afternoon for your report."

Registration Notice.

For the General Election Nov. 2nd, 1926. To the Qualified Electors of the various Wards of the

CITY OF EAST JORDAN

State of Michigan. Notice is hereby given that in conformity with the "Michigan Election Law," I, the undersigned City Clerk, will, upon any day except Sunday and a legal holiday, the day of any regular or special election or primary election, receive for registration the name of any legal voter in said City not already registered who may APPLY TO ME PERSONALLY for such registration. Provided, how ever, that I can receive no names for registration during the time intervening between the Second Saturday before any regular, special, or official primary election and the day of such election. The last day for General Registration does not apply to persons who vote under the Absent Voters' Law. (See Registration by Affidavit.)

Oct. 23, 1926—Last Day

for General Registration by personal application for said election. Notice is further hereby given that I will be at my office under Postoffice on

Oct. 9 and Oct. 16, 1926

from 8 o'clock a. m. until 8 o'clock p. m. on each said day for the purpose of REVIEWING the REGISTRATION and REGISTERING such of the qualified electors in said CITY as SHALL PROPERLY apply therefor.

The name of no person but an ACTUAL RESIDENT of the precinct at the time of registration, and entitled under the constitution, if remaining such resident, to vote at the next election shall be entered in the registration book.

REGISTRATION BY AFFIDAVIT

Sec. 10—Registering of Electors: Regular Session of 1925—Any absent voter, as defined in this act, whose name is not registered and who shall claim the right to vote by absent voter's ballot at any election or primary election, may at the time of making application for absent voter's ballot, present to the City Clerk an affidavit for registration which shall be in substantially the following form:

AFFIDAVIT FOR REGISTRATION

State of Michigan, County of____ss

I,_____being duly sworn, depose and say that I am a citizen and duly qualified elector of the___Ward of the city of East Jordan in the county of Charlevoix and State of Michigan; that my postoffice address is No.____ street____, or R. F. D. No.___P. O. _____; that I am not now registered as an elector therein and that I am voting by absent voter's ballot at the election (or primary election) to be held upon the____day of____, 192__, the application for which ballot accompanies this application that I make this affidavit for the purpose of procuring my registration as an elector in accordance with the statute; that I make the following statements in compliance with the Michigan Election Law: Age____, Race____, Birthplace____, Date of naturalization _____. I further swear or affirm that the answers given to the above questions concerning my qualifications as an elector are true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Signed_____

Taken, subscribed and sworn to before me this___day of____192__

_____Notary Public. in and for said County, State of Michigan. My Commission expires _____192____.

Note—If this acknowledgment is taken outside of the State, the Certificate of the Court that the person taking the acknowledgement is a notary must be attached.

REGISTRATION OF ABSENTEE BY OATH

If any person whose name is not registered shall offer and claim the right to vote at any election, or primary elecion, and shall UNDER OATH, state that he or she is a resident of such precinct and has resided in the WARD TWENTY DAYS next preceding such election, designating particularly the place of his or her residence and that he or she possesses the other qualifications of an elector under the constitution; and that, owing to the sickness or bodily infirmity of himself or herself, or some member of his or her family or owing to his or her absence from the City on public business or his or her own business, and without intent to avoid or delay his or her registration he or she was unable to make application for registration on the last day provided by law for the registering of electors preceding such election, then the name of such person shall be registered, and he or she shall then be permitted to vote at such election. If such applicant shall in said matter, willfully make any false statement, he or she shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and upon conviction, be subject to the pains and penalties thereof.

Provided, That any city may provide by its charter or by resolution approved by a majority of the members of its legislative body for the registration of such sick and absent voters on the last Saturday preceding any elecion or primary election at the places of voting in the several voting districts of such city, instead of on election or primary election day.

PROVISIONS IN CASE OF REMOVAL TO ANOTHER PRECINCT

Any registered and qualified voter who has ermoved from one election precinct of a Ward to another election precinct of the same Ward shall have the right, on any day previous to election day, on application to the City Clerk, to have his or her name transferred from the registration book of the precinct from which he or she has removed to the registration book of the precinct in which he or she then resides. Such elector shall have the right to have such transfer made on election day, or primary election day, by obtaining from the board of inspectors of election of the precinct from which he or she has removed a certificate of transfer, and presenting the said certificate to the board of election inspectors of the precinct in which he or she then resides.

Dated Oct. 1, A. D. 1926.

THE SINGING LINE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

A LINE that will not let you sleep
Goes singing through your brain
And, if that line you'd like to keep,
Before you sleep again
Arise and find your pen tonight,
Arise and find your pen and write,
Or when you waken at the dawn
You'll find your singing line is gone.

And life is full of singing lines,
Some impulse fine and true,
Some kindness that the heart designs
For human hands to do.
Oh, let them never sing in vain!—
Before we turn aside again
Oh, let us write that impulse on
Some life, before the line is gone.

For many a man has nobly thought,
For one who did a deed.
'T is not to know the thing we ought
To do, that now we need.
The world is full of singing lines,
Some kindness that the heart designs—
The need of me, the need of you,
Not hearts to feel, but hands to do!

The Hotel Stenographer

"HE'S A repaint job," said the Hotel Stenographer, looking after a man as he left her desk.

"Huh?" The House Detective didn't understand.

"She didn't get a new car when she married him," explained the girl, "because he's been married before. He's a repaint job and likely to peel in the hot sun of life.

"She has taught him how to wear a dress suit, but she can't keep him from carrying pipe cleaners in the pocket of his swallowtail. He just will wear his napkin and she can't induce him to throw away the gold toothpick he won in a Kelly pool tournament.

"He has a lot of money, and all that, but she was foolish enough to think she could mold him to fit a two-dollar book on etiquette she learned from cover to cover when she was a ticket seller in the Odeon Moving Picture Palace.

"One woman had already molded him and he had hardened in her mold. He is too old for her to knead him even if she did need his dough.

"The trouble with marrying a widower is, they have a certain place to put their shoes and a certain way of cutting up their food, and its almost impossible for a new wife to change them. No woman is very happy unless she thinks she is remaking her man. It can't always be done with new material—never with old. No made-over dress or husband is ever quite satisfactory to the woman in possession.

"You can saw branches off an old tree, but unless you start with it as a sapling, you can't train it. Believe thou me, I am not going to marry a widower unless all the stock of young men has been used up."

"Widowers and older men are always kinder to dumb brutes," reminded the House Detective.

SAWS

By Viola Brothers Shore

FOR THE GOOSE—

IF AN unmarried woman is restless everybody says it's because she ain't got a husband. And gen'rally it is.

By delay in usin' it, a perfectly delicious can of crab meat gets to be the worst kind of poison.

Don't tell even the truth, if it'll displease your frien'. And don't tell a lie, even if it'll please her.

Men that ain't your husband love to buy you little trifles like candy or flowers. Husbands prefer to buy you some'n lastin'—like a tombstone.

FOR THE GANDER—

If a man's got on'y a little money and makes a will, it may be the savin' of his wife. But if a man's got a lot and don't, it may be the savin' of his life.

When business is good, a man can stand nearly anything.

It's good to be an early fisherman, but it's better to be a lucky one.

Justice is one thing everybody's willin' to see the other feller get.

All the oratory in the world ain't as much use as fifteen cents' worth of gasoline when it comes to startin' a flivver.

Good Health Requires Good Elimination

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

Washington.—It was reported from the White House that the President would be unable to attend the Army-Navy football game in Chicago on November 27. There was a feeling expressed, however, that the Middle West would probably exert a tremendous pressure in the hope of causing the President to change his mind. Secretary of War Davis and Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, together with the high ranking officers of both services, will be in attendance.

Chicago.—Society women, leaders in the mercantile world, politicians and sportsmen joined in spirited rivalry at the auction of tickets to the Army-Navy football game to take place here November 27, and paid thousands of dollars for the coveted tickets.

The highest price paid was $2,500.

The lowest price paid for one box of six seats was $150.

When the five hours of bidding was over the arithmetic of the auction stood something like this: 480 boxes, with an average of 6 seats apiece, sold for approximately $100,000.

"Forty boxes remain to be sold. Bidders will have an opportunity to get these remaining boxes before October 11," the auctioneers announced.

Four hundred and thirty boxes were knocked down under gavels wielded by South Park board commissioners. About 500 persons crowded the gold room of the Congress hotel, where the sale was conducted.

Bidders studied charts of Soldier field and offered highest prices for seats near the boxes of President Coolidge and members of his cabinet.

The first box, No. 1 in Section F, which, with Nos. 3 and 7, is right back of the President's box on the Army side, sold for $2,500.

No. 3 was sold for $1,250 and No. 7 brought $1,100.

The average sale per seat was $38.80, on the basis of the incomplete figures.

The Army side of the field netted about 5 per cent more than the Navy side.

U. S. Envoy Declares Germany Is Prosperous

Washington.—President Coolidge recently received from Jacob Gould Schurman, the American ambassador to Germany, an optimistic report on the economical, financial and political condition of the rich.

Mr. Schurman said German financial conditions are good and that the government will meet its next reparations payment promptly. He said the people were prosperous and the country politically stable. The Dawes plan, he said, will stand at least another year. In summing up the situation he said:

"Germany appears much more prosperous than a year ago. Unemployment, with 1,500,000 out of work, furnishes the only problem. This compares with conditions before the war."

A change of sentiment toward France is noticeable, Mr. Schurman asserted. This, he said, is noticeable in both countries, and is reflected in the newspapers.

"The people are beginning to realize," he said, "that unless conditions are changed the two nations must go on indefinitely tearing each other to pieces in battle and that this is not worth while."

"The Last Buffalo Hunt" Opposed by Plainsmen

Norfolk, Neb.—Maj. G. W. Lillie, "Pawnee Bill," of Pawnee, Okla., and Dr. Richard Jerome Tanner, "Diamond Dick," of Norfolk, are jointly protesting against what they declare is "the deliberate planning of willful slaughtering of 800 buffalo" at what is termed "the last buffalo hunt" to be staged during October in Utah. "Pawnee Bill" has written "Diamond Dick" that he refused an invitation to be present at the hunt, and "Diamond Dick" announced that he, too, would refuse to accept an invitation.

FAVORS SURVEY OF DRAINAGE SYSTEMS

Secretary Hoover Urges Permanent Improvement.

Omaha, Neb.—Sponsors and supporters of the Missouri river waterways project who took part in a series of conferences with Secretary of Commerce Hoover here, were advised by him that "it is high time the drainage system of the United States is made the object of a nation-wide survey."

Secretary Hoover declared that such survey could be made the basis of reclamation plans, whereby lands at present unsuited for settlement could be made to support an additional population of 40,000,000.

"Permanent improvements in the development of waterways is essential," said Mr. Hoover. "We must study each drainage plan and its relation to others before determining how a start should be made. It is vital that both the engineering and financial points be considered and that the program first provide for those works which will mean the greatest good to the greatest number.

"I believe it advisable," Mr. Hoover added, "to set up some kind of a determining body that will give immediate consideration to each of the drainage systems, in order that a general national program may be drafted as soon as possible."

New York G. O. P. Goes Wet; For State Option

New York.—Reflecting the reaction against bone dry prohibition in these parts, the Republican party of New York went wet in convention assembled.

Hoping by this means to prevail in contest with the Democratic party, which has opposed bone dry prohibition in this state for six years, the Republican state convention adopted a platform too wet for the Republican bone drys to stand on. This action definitely divorces the Republican party from the Anti-Saloon league.

The platform, which was unanimously adopted, declares for enforcement of national prohibition so long as it remains law, but commends to the voters the referendum on the question of modification so as to permit individual states to define intoxicating liquor.

$122,500,000 Minimum Price for C., M. & St. P.
